Residents Urged to Prioritize Public Safety Amid Armed Terrorist Threats

ARMED terrorists have been launching attacks by using residential homes and administrative buildings in towns and villages as cover, where they have forcibly settled. They aim to shield themselves from Tatmadaw counterattacks while also persuading temporarily displaced persons to return to their native areas and recruiting new members. That enables terrorists to use civilians as human shields. Tatmadaw is committed to safeguarding the sovereignty of the State and will respond to these threats based on intelligence and prevailing conditions. Therefore, residents in areas where terrorists have taken control must prioritize their safety and protect themselves from being exploited by these groups.

Shape a society free from corruption

CRIMINAL exploitation is one of the most heinous acts in human society. The consequences arising from such exploitation can easily destroy an individual's life and even bring down an entire nation.

Those who commit crimes act solely for their own benefit, without ever considering morality. However, when they eventually face the punishment of the law, they experience both personal and emotional suffering as a result of their misdeeds. At that point, no one can come to their rescue. Therefore, from the moment one begins their journey in life and gains understanding, everyone must avoid making selfish decisions that form the basis of criminal acts. Through this, people can refrain from actions that harm others, such as bribery, oppression, exploitation, or verbal abuse.

In line with the theme set for the International Anti-Corruption Day: "Uniting with Youth Against Corruption: Shaping Tomorrow's Integrity", everyone has to take care of their activities to be free from corruption so as to build themselves with integrity while shaping a peaceful, safe and prosperous society. If so, individuals from the society will have the chance to enjoy the heavenly abode and can leave a better legacy for new generations. This theme highlights the crucial role that young people play in fighting corruption and building a future with greater integrity and transparency.

care of their activities to be free from corruption so as to build themselves with integrity while shaping a peaceful, safe and prosperous society. If so, individuals from the society will have the chance to enjoy the heavenly abode and can leave a better legacy for new generations. This theme highlights the crucial role that young people play in fighting corruption and building a future with greater integrity and transparency.

Corruption is a complex social, political and economic phenomenon that affects all countries. Corruption undermines democratic institutions, slows economic development and contributes to governmental instability. As such, everyone has the right to experience happiness and peace within their community. In order to live with dignity in society, everyone must change their mindsets to avoid engaging in criminal or harmful behaviour and work toward building a joyful and harmonious life.

gins their journey in life and gains understanding, everyone must avoid making selfish decisions that form the basis of criminal acts. Through this, people can refrain from actions that harm others, such as bribery, oppression, exploitation, or verbal abuse.

Today's world is facing a variety of challenges. Moreover, the human society is trying to overcome tragedies, inequalities and injustices, many of which are tied to corruption. With 1.9 billion young people in the world, fighting corruption is vital for the future of nearly a quarter of the global population.

The campaign for International Anti-Corruption Day 2024-2025 focuses on the role young guardians of integrity play as advocates, raising awareness about corruption and its impacts on their communities. They will actively participate in discussions, share their experiences and propose innovative solutions to combat corruption. The campaign will amplify the voices of integrity leaders of tomorrow, allowing them to express their concerns and aspirations, with the hope that their appeals will be heard and acted upon.

In line with the theme set for the International Anti-Corruption Day: "Uniting with Youth Against Corruption: Shaping Tomorrow's Integrity", everyone has to take MYANMAR is preparing for another important election that will decide the country's future direction. This election is especially meaningful because a large number of young people will be voting for the first time. Many of them have grown up in a changing society and are eager to take part in the democratic process. Their voices represent new hopes, ideas, and dreams for a better nation. When young people participate actively, they bring energy and creativity to politics. They can help promote fairness, equality, and progress in their communities. Every vote cast by a young citizen is a step towards building a stronger democracy. Therefore, youth participation is not just a right – it is a responsibility. The decisions made today will affect their future, so young voters in Myanmar need to stand up, speak out, and help shape the nation's path forward.

Myanmar's Youth Demographic

In Myanmar, young people make up a large part of the population and are becoming an important force in shaping the country's future. According to recent reports, about one-third of Myanmar's people are between the ages of 15 and 35. This means millions of young citizens will have the chance to influence the next election. With their numbers and energy, youth can play a major role in deciding who leads the country and what policies are made. Many young voters care deeply about education, job opportunities, technology, and justice. If they vote actively, political parties will have to listen to their voices and create plans that meet their needs. On the other hand, if they stay silent, their future may be decided by others. Therefore, the participation of young people is not only powerful but also necessary for Myanmar's democratic growth and national development.

Why First-Time Votes Matter

First-time voters play a vital role in every election because they bring new ideas, hopes, and energy into the political process. Most of them are young and eager to see positive change in their country. Their votes often reflect the dreams of a new generation that values fairness, peace, and progress. Unlike older voters, they are not tied to traditions or political habits, so they can think independently and choose leaders who represent their vision for the future. The decisions made by first-time voters can shape the direction of a nation for many years. Their choices influence government policies on education, jobs, technology, and social equality. When they vote responsibly, they help build a stronger democracy and encourage accountability among leaders. Therefore, every first-time vote matters; it is a voice of hope and a powerful step toward a better and more inclusive Myanmar.

Challenges Faced by Young Voters

Although young people in Myanmar have great potential to influence elections, they also face many challenges that limit their participation. One major problem is the lack of civic education. Many students do not fully understand how elections work or why their vote is important. This leads to low awareness and confidence in taking part. Another challenge is misinformation, especially on social media, where false news can easily confuse first-time voters. Some youth also feel political apathy because they believe their votes will not make a difference. Moreover, there is a clear gap between urban and rural areas. Young people in cities often have better access to the internet, news, and voter education programs, while those in rural areas receive less information and fewer opportunities to engage. To build a stronger democracy, these barriers must be reduced so all young voters can make informed and active choices.

Youth-Led Movements and Civic Engagement

In recent years, young people in Myanmar have become strong voices for change and accountability. Many youth organizations have also focused on community service, helping displaced families, promoting education, and raising awareness about human rights. In ethnic regions, young people such as Kayin and Kachin youth have worked to protect their land, culture, and environment. These actions show that Myanmar's youth are not only demanding political reform but also working to build a fair and inclusive society. Their courage and teamwork reflect a deep desire for accountability, freedom, and progress. Through civic engagement, Myanmar's young generation continues to shape the nation's path toward a more hopeful and democratic future.

Creating a Culture of Participation

To strengthen democracy in Myanmar, it is important to create a culture where young people actively take part in elections and civic life. One effective way is through peer influence, when friends and classmates discuss voting, it motivates others to do the same. Social media campaigns can also inspire youth by sharing real stories, short videos, and messages that highlight the power of every vote. In schools, civic education programmes and student-led activities can teach the value of participation and help first-time voters understand their rights and responsibilities. Families, teachers, and community leaders also play key roles by guiding young people to think critically and make informed choices. Civil society organizations can organize workshops and youth dialogues to promote trust and engagement. When everyone works together, voting becomes more than a duty – it becomes a shared commitment to shaping Myanmar's future with responsibility and hope.

Vision for Myanmar's Future Through Youth Voices

Myanmar's young generation dreams of a future filled with peace, progress, and opportunity. Many young people hope for better education, where learning is creative and accessible for all. Others wish for environmental protection, clean cities, and sustainable development that safeguards the country's natural beauty. Job creation and fair employment are also key goals, as youth want to build stable and meaningful lives at home rather than abroad. These hopes can only become reality through active participation in democracy. By voting, young citizens can choose leaders who value education, protect the environment, and create opportunities for youth empowerment. Every vote is a way to express these dreams and turn them into action.

A Call to Action

As the election approaches, it is time for young people across Myanmar to step forward with confidence and purpose. Every single vote has the power to influence the direction of the nation. Youth voices are not just important; they are essential for creating meaningful change. By voting, young citizens can turn their hopes for education, peace, equality, and progress into real results. This is the moment to speak up, take responsibility, and show that the new generation is ready to lead. Your voice matters. Your choice shapes Myanmar. Together, young voters can build the nation they truly believe in.

Technology and Spirituality: Friends or Foes?

By Khin Maung Myint

Why scientific and spiritual values should work in harmony, not in opposition

In the modern world, technology rushes forward like a river after heavy rain — fast, forceful, and difficult to channel. Artificial intelligence, biotechnology, social media, and digital communication shape our days in ways that would have seemed like magic only a generation ago. Yet alongside this whirlwind of innovation, people still reach for meaning, emotional balance, and moral guidance. Spirituality remains the quiet lamp in the corner, offering light when the power of intellect alone is not enough.

Are these two domains — technology and spirituality — destined to collide?

From the lens of Buddhist philosophy, the answer is simple: no. They are not rivals on a battlefield but two oxen pulling the same cart — one strong in power, the other steady in direction. When guided wisely, they work in harmony to move society forward with both efficiency and heart.

The Middle Way: Avoiding Extreme Views

At the heart of Buddhism lies the Middle Way — the gentle path between “too much” and “too little”. Technology fits this teaching perfectly. Like a knife that can cut vegetables or injure a hand, it carries no inherent virtue or poison. Everything depends on Cetana, the intention of the user.

A smartphone may spread gossip or spread kindness.

Artificial intelligence may manipulate emotions or heal the sick.

The tool is merely the bow; the intention is the archer.

The Middle Way asks us to avoid two traps: the belief that “technology will save everything,” and the fear that “technology will destroy us.” As a Burmese proverb says, “The bee gives honey, but it can also sting”. Balance, not blind enthusiasm or panic, is the wiser stance.

Technology as a Modern Force for Reducing Suffering

The Buddha taught that knowledge is most valuable when it reduces Dukkha — the burden of suffering and dissatisfaction. Under this light, modern technology becomes a strong ally in compassion.

It improves medical care, connecting diagnoses with cures faster than ever before.

It brings isolated people together across continents.

It offers mental health support through digital platforms.

It predicts natural disasters and saves lives.

It opens doors of education to millions who were once left outside.

Used with Karuna — the heartfelt wish to alleviate suffering — technology becomes a bridge of kindness reaching far beyond the limits of time and distance.

A small lantern can brighten a long, dark road, and in today's age, that lantern is often powered by electricity.

The Need for Mindfulness in a Hyperconnected Era

Yet even the sweetest fruit attracts insects.

Technology, for all its gifts, can also feed craving (Tanha) and confusion (Moha).

Endless notifications pull the mind like a restless horse.

Social media invites unhealthy comparison.

Information overload creates anxiety.

Virtual connections may crowd out genuine human presence.

Without mindfulness, the digital world turns into a forest of illusions. The Buddhist practice of Sati — being fully awake to the present moment — offers the antidote. With awareness, we can use technology as a servant, not become its servant.

Mindfulness is the hand that holds the reins. It helps us set healthy limits, choose meaningful interactions, and notice how our digital habits shape our hearts. As the saying goes, “The boat may float on water, but it sinks when water enters it”. Technology is the water outside the boat; mindfulness prevents it from flooding in.

Beyond Conflict: A Non-Dualistic View of Knowledge

Buddhism does not divide the world into what is “spiritual” and what is “scientific”.

The mind that meditates is the same mind that creates machines and solves equations.

Science studies the outer world of causes and conditions.

Spirituality studies the inner world of intention and consciousness.

Together, they are like two eyes, offering depth, clarity, and a full view of reality. When one eye is closed, our vision becomes flat and misleading. When both are open, the world becomes clearer and more meaningful.

Technology as a Modern Form of Skilful Means

In Buddhism, Upekkha (Skilful Means) teaches that methods must evolve with time. Centuries ago, monks walked barefoot from village to village to share teachings. Today, a single online talk can reach millions before sunrise.

Technology, when guided by wisdom, becomes the new vehicle of compassion — a digital Dharma wheel.

It spreads knowledge, bridges cultures, supports mental wellness, and helps build more inclusive societies. The tools may be new, but the intention remains the same.

As another proverb reminds us:

“The bird changes trees, but not its wings”.

The form evolves; the purpose endures.

Conclusion: Harmony, Not Opposition

The question “Technology and spirituality: friends or foes?” only arises when we see them as two separate worlds. Buddhism shows us a more integrated view.

Technology provides power. Spirituality provides direction.

Together, they form the compass and the map for the journey ahead.

In the uncertain landscape of the 21st century, the union of scientific progress and spiritual wisdom may be the very key to building a humane, ethical, and sustainable future. After all, “A cart moves best when both wheels turn together”.

In Myanmar, the cervical cancer vaccine has been administered annually to girls aged nine to 11 since 2023, using both school-based and community-based approaches, said Union Minister Dr Thet Khaing Win at the commemorative ceremony at the Myanmar Convention Centre on Mindhamma Road, Mayangon, Yangon.

He emphasised the need to strengthen efforts for the community-based vaccination approach. The vaccination (HPV MAC - HPV Multi-Age Cohort Vaccination) for girls will be further extended, increasing

Assistant Secretary-General for Youth Affairs' message on International Anti-Corruption Day 2025

1. Corruption is not always visible, but its impact is everywhere. It weakens institutions, affecting all of us, increasing inequalities and eroding the trust that keeps societies together. When corruption spreads, tensions deepen, and communities become more fragile and vulnerable to conflict.
2. On this International Anti-Corruption Day, we recognize that young people understand these challenges and see these realities very clearly across the world. They are calling for systems that are more transparent, fair, and accountable. Their demand for integrity is a broader aspiration for stability, inclusion, and peace.
3. This message could not be timelier. This year, we mark the 10th anniversary of the UN Security Council resolution on youth peace and security. A milestone that affirmed the essential role of young people in preventing conflict and sustaining peace.
4. A decade ago, the international community acknowledged a simple truth. Peace is impossible without the meaningful participation of young people. Today, that role is even clearer. Integrity and anti-corruption are central to a stability agenda that directly impacts the youth peace and security framework.
5. When young people push for ethical leadership, for inclusive governance and for more just institutions, they are helping to prevent conflict before it begins. They are building the foundations of lasting peace and development. From leading community initiatives to creating innovative digital tools for transparency, young people are shaping a future where openness and accountability are guiding principles for public life. Their work is a reminder that where integrity grows, peace has space to grow, too.
6. But creating this future is a shared responsibility. It requires open dialogue, joint work, respect for diverse perspectives, and a commitment from all of us to strengthen trust wherever we can.
7. Supporting integrity, transparency, and ethical behaviour benefits everyone. When we stand with young people and amplify these values, we can create communities grounded in trust, in resilience, and in lasting peace. A world where every young person has the opportunity to thrive. — UNODC

Myanmar reports no new COVID-19 cases

THE Ministry of Health tested 112 samples from 8 pm on 30 November 2025 to 8 pm on 7 December 2025, and no new cases were detected. Therefore, no new casualties were reported.

Currently, there is no need to worry about infection and deaths from COVID-19, but all need to follow personal hygiene methods, and the high-risk groups.

- Elderly people (aged 60 and above)
- People with diabetes, chronic respiratory diseases, and cancer
- Pregnant women (especially those beyond the third month of pregnancy) are prioritized to receive COVID-19 booster shots.

More detailed COVID-19 information can be found on the website of the Ministry of Health, moh.gov.mm.

'Five Nights at Freddy's' sequel slashes to top of box office

HORROR video-game movie "Five Nights at Freddy's 2" proved jump scares can still rake in the cash with a debut that ruled North American theatres, industry estimates showed Sunday.

The second film in Universal's "Freddy's" franchise — about animatronic characters at a pizza shop, the tween girl (Piper Rubio) who befriends them, and the murderous if cheesy events that follow — brought in $63 million in the Friday-through-Sunday period, Exhibitor Relations reported.

It earned another $46 million internationally.

"Critics' reviews are poor, but the genre is immune to reviews," said David A. Gross of Franchise Entertainment Research.

"The audience score is more important, and it's very good for a horror picture, although not as good as the first pic."

Sliding to second spot was another sequel, Disney's feel-good animated film "Zootopia 2".

The buddy cop comedy featuring a menagerie of talking animals battling stereotypes earned $43 million, for a two-week total of $220 million and a worldwide haul nearing the $1 billion mark.

Dropping one spot to third place, with $16.8 million in its third weekend, was "Wicked: For Good," Universal's second chapter in the musical saga of Oz's most notable witches — the green-skinned, outcast Elphaba (Cynthia Erivo) and popular pink-wearing Glinda (Ariana Grande). — AFP

Philippines grapples with sharp, alarming HIV epidemic in Asia-Pacific

THE Philippines is confronting the fastest-rising human immunodeficiency virus (HIV) epidemic in the Asia-Pacific region, with an average of 61 Filipinos diagnosed every day this year, up 22 per cent from last year, prompting urgent calls for more decisive national action.

The World Health Organization (WHO) earlier identified the Philippines, Fiji, and Papua New Guinea as the countries in the region where HIV infections continue to climb. It said the three now face some of the region's sharpest surges in new HIV infections.

Fiji has recorded a tenfold increase in cases over the past decade, driven mainly by injecting drug use, while Papua New Guinea declared HIV a national crisis in June amid spikes among women of reproductive age and children. — Xinhua

How Paris's oldest bridge will become an 'immersive cave'

'You will be completely lost in terms of your sense of direction and reference points in relation to the outside world,' JR told AFP. PHOTO: AFP

FRENCH artist JR, who made his way from tagging graffiti on the street to being one of the most recognizable figures on the country's art scene, has told AFP how he plans to turn the oldest bridge in Paris into an "immersive cave" for his latest project.

Once hailed as the "French Banksy" after the secretive British street artist, JR has become famous for outsize projects, having already transformed the Palais Garnier Paris opera to look like a cave and mounted a painting that made the famous Louvre pyramid seem to disappear.

Now he intends to create a 120-metre "cave" along the Pont Neuf, the oldest bridge over the Seine in Paris, that anyone will be free to walk through.

"You will be completely lost in terms of your sense of direction and reference points in relation to the outside world," JR, whose real name is Jean Rene, told AFP in a recent interview at his studio in Paris.

"It's going to be a monumental project, but this is a city that knows how to welcome monumental projects," he said, hailing how Paris handled last year's Olympic Games.

He said the project, which will open next June after two years of work, was an homage to an earlier work by artists

Christo and Jeanne-Claude.

The France-based couple wrapped the same bridge in woven fabric in 1985.

"The task is made easier for me because I'm following in their footsteps," he said.

Easier in terms of construction, but also in terms of administration.

While Christo and Jeanne-Claude battled for 10 years to make their project a reality in the face of political reluctance, Paris Mayor Anne Hidalgo welcomed JR's plan calling it a "gift" to Paris.

Cars and buses will be banned from the bridge during the installation's run between 6 and 28 June. — AFP

Georgia's street dogs stir affection, fear, national debate

AT a bus stop in central Tbilisi, two tagged dogs dozed on a bench as some commuters smiled at them and others cast angry glances.

In the streets of the Georgian capital, such scenes are part of daily life: community-fed "yard dogs", yellow municipal tags on their ears, lounge outside bakeries, metro entrances and school gates.

The free-roaming canines stir both affection and fear. What to do with their swelling numbers — in the tens of thousands in Tbilisi alone — has become a nationwide dilemma.

Stray animals tied the top spot for public concerns in a poll by the National Democratic Institute, with 22 per cent of respondents naming it the most pressing issue.

Many welcome the dogs as a symbol of Tbilisi, a showcase of Georgian hospitality and the warm street life that draws tourists to the capital.

"Street dogs in Georgia have made a more positive impact on tourism and the image of Georgia than people and culture alone," said journalist Elena Nikoleisvili, 51, who helps street dogs.

"If anything, these adorable creatures should be the symbol of the capital — like the cats of Istanbul."

On cafe terraces, regulars slip bones under tables as mongrels curl up between patrons' feet, while each neighbourhood and cul-de-sac has its own local canine mascot. — AFP

China's departure tax refunds grow sharply in first 11 months

THE number of overseas visitors claiming China's departure tax refund surged 285 per cent year on year in the first 11 months of 2025, according to data released by the State Taxation Administration on Monday.

In the same period, both the sales of tax refund-eligible goods and the total amount of tax refunds increased 98.8 per cent year on year, the data showed.

China has introduced a series of measures since April to optimize its tax refund system for overseas visitors.

The policy optimization has included the establishment of instant tax refund counters in major shopping districts in cities such as Beijing, Shanghai, Chongqing, Chengdu and Guangzhou. Cities including Shanghai and Hangzhou have also introduced online refund options, making the process more efficient.

The continued optimization of tax refund services has better met overseas visitors' refund needs and further fuelled their enthusiasm for traveling in China.

As of the end of November, there were 12,252 departure tax refund shops across the country, with more than 7,000 of them offering immediate refund upon purchase services, according to

Germany industrial output jumps in boost for economy

GERMAN industrial production unexpectedly jumped in October, official data showed Monday, the latest sign that Europe's crisis-racked top economy may be turning a corner.

Factory output rose 1.8 per cent month-on-month, according to preliminary data from federal statistics agency Destatis, after a 1.1 per cent rise in September.

The positive result, boosted by the construction and the machinery sectors, was far better than a 0.55 per cent decline forecast by analysts surveyed ly positive production trend in September and October, no noticeable upturn in industrial activity is expected at the end of the year," it warned in a statement.

According to Destatis, production in the construction sector rose 3.3 per cent in October and in the manufacture of machinery and equipment, it was up 2.8 per cent.

But it dipped 1.3 per cent in the crisis-hit auto sector.

October's increase was the latest positive sign after industrial orders — an indicator of future business activity — jumped in the same month, driven by strong demand for defence goods as Germany rearms.

Chancellor Friedrich Merz has hugely increased public spending on defence and infrastructure to get the economy moving again after two years of recession, although he faces criticism that it is moving slowly.

The German government is forecasting the economy will eke out meagre growth of 0.2 per cent in 2025, before picking up speed in 2026 on the back of the spending bonanza. — AFP

SINGAPORE'S competition regulator has found that two retailers of consumer electronics and home appliances used website design features to mislead consumers.

In a statement on Monday, the Competition and Consumer Commission of Singapore (CCS) said that Courts, a major consumer electronics, IT and furniture retailer, had automatically added unsolicited items to customers' online shopping carts.

Courts has given an undertaking to the CCS to immediately stop the practice, and agreed to refund customers affected by what the regulator described as an unfair trade practice. — Xinhua

Tesla Shanghai factory hits 4-mln car output mark

TESLA'S Gigafactory in Shanghai rolled out its four millionth vehicle on Monday, according to the company, marking a new milestone as the US carmaker deepens its development in step with China's rapidly growing new energy sector.

The company's Shanghai plant, its first gigafactory outside the United States, began construction in January 2019 and produced its first vehicle in December of that year.

Now turning out a new car roughly every 30 seconds, the plant accounts for nearly half of Tesla's global electric vehicle deliveries.

It took more than 30 months for the plant to produce its first 1 million vehicles, while output rose from three million to four million in about 14 months, according to the company.

It serves both the Chinese mainland market and overseas customers, with vehicles exported to Europe and the Asia-Pacific region. In October, the Shanghai plant shipped more than 35,000 vehicles abroad, the highest monthly export volume in two years, according to the company. — Xinhua

Rising gold prices added over $100 bln to Russia's reserves in past year

RUSSIA'S gold reserves have grown by $112 billion in just one year, thanks to rising prices for the precious metal, according to Sputnik's calculations based on the Bank of Russia data.

At the beginning of December last year, the Bank of Russia held $198.1 billion worth of gold bars in its vaults, while a year later, the figure had risen to $310.7 billion.

This is all due to the rally in the gold market: over the past 12 months, the price of the metal has increased by about 60 per cent, to $4,300 from $2,600 per troy ounce. At the same time, in physical terms, Russia's gold reserves, on the contrary, have decreased slightly. According to the latest available data, they stood at 2,326.5 tonnes, while exactly one year ago they were 6 tonnes higher. — SPUTNIK

Indonesia suffers food, medical shortages as Asia flood tolls rise

REGIONS hit by floods that killed hundreds in Indonesia were suffering from food and medical shortages, authorities said, as elephants pitched in on Monday to help clear up debris. Tropical storms and monsoon rains have pummelled Southeast and South Asia this month, triggering landslides and flash floods from the rainforests of Indonesia's western Sumatra island to highland plantations in Sri Lanka.

"Everything is lacking, especially medical personnel. We are short on doctors," Muzakir Manaf, the governor of Indonesia's Aceh province, told reporters late Sunday.

Indonesia's national disaster mitigation agency (BNPB) said 961 people in Aceh, North Sumatra and West Sumatra had been killed, while 293 were missing. More than a million people were displaced, the agency said. In Pidie Jaya, a district in

Aceh badly affected by the floods, four elephants from a nearby training centre picked up large pieces of rubble with their trunks and helped shift stuck vehicles. "We brought four elephants to clear the debris from the houses of the communities that were swept away by the flood," Hadi Sofyan, the head of a local conservation agency, told AFP. "Our target is to clean the debris near the residents' houses so they can access their homes," he said, adding the elephants would be used for the rest of the week. The downpours and subsequent landslides throughout western Indonesia have injured at least 5,000 people and devastated infrastructure, including schools and hospitals. In the city of Banda Aceh, long queues formed for drinking water and fuel, and prices of basic commodities such as eggs were skyrocketing, an AFP correspondent said. Costs to rebuild after the disaster could run up to 51.82 trillion rupiah ($3.1 billion), the BNPB said late Sunday. In Sri Lanka, the military deployed thousands of extra troops to aid recovery efforts on Monday after a devastating cyclone caused a wave of destruction and killed 627 people. — AFP

Nobel laureate Kitagawa urges long-term basic research support in Japan

THIS year's Nobel chemistry prize co-winner, Susumu Kitagawa, said Sunday that long-term support is vital for scientists to work on basic research. "It takes 25 years for research results to be implemented in society, so long-term support is necessary," Kitagawa said at a press conference in Stockholm ahead of the award ceremony on Wednesday. "I have advised the government many times to increase support for more basic research," he said. The 74-year-old professor at Kyoto University won the Nobel prize for developing metal-organic frameworks, or MOFs, networks of metal ions and organic molecules that can capture and release gases. Experts expect MOFs to help solve energy and environmental issues. Omar Yaghi, one of Kitagawa's co-winners, said MOFs are suitable for gas adsorption and separation and can separate carbon dioxide from air or extract drinking water. — Kyodo

Iraqi FM "surprised" at US remarks on Iraq's internal situation

IRAQI Foreign Minister Fuad Hussein told US Special Envoy for Syria Tom Barrack on Sunday that the Iraqi government is surprised at Barrack's recent statements regarding Iraq's internal situation, according to a statement by the Iraqi Foreign Ministry. In recent interviews on the US Middle East policy, Barrack said decentralization has never really worked anywhere in this region, citing Iraq as an example. He also asserted that while the Iraqi prime minister was elected, he has "zero power" as the prime minister "can't form a coalition of the parliament". During their meeting, which was held on the sidelines of the 23rd Doha Forum in Qatar, Hussein stressed that the choices of the Iraqi people are respected, and that democracy and the federal system are enshrined in the Constitution and have become a firmly established path with no alternative, despite the challenges, read the statement.
